HUMANE WORKERS PLAN FOR ACTIVE EFFORTS IN BEHALF OF THE ANIMALS

Will Employ an Agent to Watch for Cases of Cruelty and Prosecute Officers Elected.

Rejuvenation of the El Paso Humane society occurred last night at the chamber of commerce where about 25 animal lovers met in the name of charity to dumb animals. El Paso soon will have a humane agent, vested with the power of arrest and backed by a strong society. Plans made last night are carried out.

"The work is for a man to do," said Mrs. M. A. Tilton, president of the old organization. Mrs. Tilton reviewed the work of the society since its organization, telling of the rescue work among children as well as animals. Dr. T. A. Bray, former treasurer, told of his activities in protection of overworked horses. "Stables have been visited, and there has been much accomplished," he said. "We never have found it necessary to make any arrests." Mrs. D. H. Reckhart mentioned the abuse of horses in many building operations now going on in the city.

A most uncomplimentary thing to El Paso was mentioned by Mrs. Tilton, the truth of which was borne out by others present. El Paso resorters at Cloudcroft, it was said, are in the habit of leaving pet dogs and cats at the resort after the end of the season. The pets, which have served to amuse the children of the visitors, are found in a deplorable state of neglect, hunger and want, and usually shot by the native residents. Cloudcroft people will be petitioned to establish a system of registration of pets whereby all animals entering the resort at the beginning of the season must be conveyed back to El Paso.

The matter of securing convictions and arrests was brought up, and caused a lively argument. It was necessary for the society to have a private agent, the majority agreed. Mrs. Tilton said that the experience of the society showed that on account of the political evil, arrests and sometimes prosecutions were not made by the regular officials. It was suggested to see mayor Sweeney with a view of having the fines levied on offenders against animal kind turned over to the society fund, which must support the humane agent, who will give his entire attention to the work.

There was much discussion as to what variety of emblem should be worn by the members. Some advocated a ribbon badge, others an enamel pin. Undecided, the matter was laid on the table to come up at the next meeting.

Following are the newly elected officers: President, Dr. T. A. Bray; first vice president, Mrs. D. H. Reckhart; second vice president, Mrs. C. M. Hemple; secretary, Mrs. W. H. F. Judd; treasurer, Mrs. P. H. Curran.

A committee appointed to enlarge the membership of the organization follows: Mrs. W. A. White, Mrs. T. A. Bray, Mrs. E. H. Yale, Mrs. H. Jacobard, Mrs. N. C. Hemple, Mrs. M. Hitchcock, Miss T. L. Westcott, Mrs. H. Clarke, Mrs. M. C. Rhelm, Mrs. L. Ford.

BANKING IN FRANCE; HOW THE CENTRAL BANK AIDS THE COUNTRY

The United States Monetary Commission Makes Public Data Gathered in French Financial Centers.

Washington, D. C., April 5.—How the Bank of France has steered its course clear of political complications and has prevented financial crises by serving as a harbor of refuge for the joint stock banks is told in a graphic manner in a question and answer interview with M. Pailin, governor of the bank, included in the publication of the National Monetary commission which will be issued tomorrow under the title "Interviews on the Banking and Currency Systems of England, France, Germany, Switzerland, Scotland, and Italy."

The Bank of France was founded in the year 1800 and its charter was renewed in 1897, expiring in 1920. Almost the first question asked Governor Pailin was whether the bank was ever attacked in the controversies between political parties. He answered in these words:

"No charge has ever been made that the bank favored or aided any political party. There is never any claim that politics enters in any degree into the management of the bank. Except for the renewal of the charter in 1897, no legislation affecting the bank has been enacted since 1857. There is no sentiment for any change in banking methods nor for any new legislation. It should be added that neither the governor nor deputy governor is permitted to be a member of either body of parliament."

Government Owns No Stock.
The government does not own a share of the capital of 182,500,000 francs ($35,225,000), but exercises decisive influence through the appointment of the governor and deputy governors and one of the boards of the bank and the other two deputy governors are appointed by decree of the president of the republic upon the proposal of the minister of finance. Their terms of service are not fixed, but usually extend over many years.

Some light is thrown upon the absence of political hostility to the bank by the number of its branches, the manner in which it aids small commerce, and the strength which it affords to the banking system of the country. There are about 500 banking offices scattered over France, the more important, to the number of 117, being known as branches and the others as auxiliaries and agencies. The managers are remunerated by fixed salaries, which does not however, prevent the bank from letting all the staff participate in the results of particularly productive years by exceptional allowances. There is also a pension system for employees, which guarantees to each agent entitled thereto at least one-half the annual salary after 30 years' service.

Bank Discounts.
The bank is not limited to rediscounts, but has a line of clients of its own. It was stated by M. Pailin that about 70 per cent of the paper held bears the signature of some bank as one of the endorsers, but the number of merchants and manufacturers asking for direct discounts has been increasing. The average maturity of paper discounted during the year 1907 was 26 days, and the average value of bills discounted was 732 francs ($141). The low average obtained from the mingling of bills for very large amounts with smaller ones is due to the extent to which the bank discounts or rediscounts bills for very small amounts. The minimum limit adopted to discount was lowered in 1895 to 5 francs (95 1-2 cents), and the number of small bills discounted has never ceased to increase since that time. In 1907 the number of bills below 100 francs ($19.20) were more than 3,500,000 in a total of 7,500,000. Anyone who is known to the bank can open an account, the minimum being only 500 francs ($95.50). After an account is opened, the depositor may discount paper for as small a sum as 5 francs, provided it meets other requirements.

The Bank's Duty.
The bank has for many years charged the lowest rates in Europe almost consecutively for discounting bills. When M. Pailin was asked if it would be more advantageous for the bank, considered simply as a bank, to impose different rates under different circumstances and at different places, he made this answer:

"As a banking establishment, if we thought it advisable to apply different rates, we could easily become the masters of the market. But in our position of bank of France, organized to serve the interests of public credit in a democratic country, we do not believe ourselves justified to use this option."

Discussing later on the method pursued by the bank to maintain its great gold reserve of more than $600,000,000, M. Pailin said:

"It is a principle consecrated by experience that the supreme means of defense for an issue bank is to protect its metallic reserve. It is to the rate of discount and we never touch it of this principle. However, the extent of our reserves allows us to contemplate without emotion important variations of our metallic stock, and we only exceptionally have recourse to a measure which is always painful for commerce and industry. The stability, and the moderation of the rate of discount are considered as precious advantages."

which the French market owes to the organization and traditional conduct of the Bank of France."

Money in Bank.
M. Pailin, in response to further questions, that in the joint-stock banks which the commission would visit they would find the liquid cash very small in proportion to the deposits. "In France," he declared, "we consider that the strength of a bank consists more in the composition of its portfolio, i. e., in the value of its commercial bills, rather than in the importance of its cash reserves." The reason for this was stated to be that for the French private banks the proportion of cash to liabilities is less significant than in the case of the banks of the United States, which are organized for the rapid conversion of good assets into ready money.

People Satisfied.
M. Pailin was asked point blank, "Is the Bank of France regarded as a bank for banks or as a bank for the people?" To this he made answer thus:

"The Bank of France remained for a long time the bank for banks, but since it has covered so much territory with its numerous branches; since the minimum amount of all its operations has been lowered; since it has tried to simplify and minimize the formalities required by its special charter, the industrial and commercial world has come to use the bank directly for the renewal of their deposits. At the same time its credit has come out stronger, firmer, more popular from all the political and financial crises, so much so that today one can reply with hesitation to a much larger degree. At the same time its credit has come out stronger, firmer, more popular from all the political and financial crises, so much so that today one can reply with hesitation to a much larger degree. At the same time its credit has come out stronger, firmer, more popular from all the political and financial crises, so much so that today one can reply with hesitation to a much larger degree."

In order to determine if the system of monopoly of note issue, which is given to the Bank of France, was acceptable to the country as well as to the financial community, M. Pailin was asked if there was in any quarter any agitation for a change in this respect. He replied in the negative but added that the people were always inclined to ask more from the Bank of France—to open new branches; to extend the benefit of its credit to a larger number of places; and to increase the facilities of every kind offered to its customers.

AMUSEMENTS

AT THE MAJESTIC.

The Majestic musical comedy company under the direction of Fritz Fields and the management of W. M. Monahan left today for Tucson, where it will open a summer season. Earl V. McLean goes as musical director.

The Will A. Peters company opened last night at the Majestic for an indefinite engagement. The company presents "tabloid comedies" and sketches, according to the program, and it makes

WILL A. PETERS.
The audiences laugh, according to the noise that emanated from the Majestic on its first appearance last evening. To the credit of the company, it can be said that the stuff presented was at least devoid of anything that was not clean. None of the jokes were shady. Even aged comedy is excusable when clean. The company gives three shows a night.

MILLS BUILDING TO BE WRECKED SOON

Tenants Must Vacate Premises by April 20—New Plans Drawn.

But two more weeks remain for the old Mills building. The contract for wrecking the structure has been let and work will begin as soon as the tenants, now occupying it, secure other quarters. April 20 has been set as the final day for tenants to vacate the building and it is thought the wreckers will begin work on Monday.

The architects are at work drawing the plans for the new Anson Mills building in order that they may be approved by Gen. Mills and let out to bids as soon as possible.

SKYSCRAPER BEING BUILT BY AID OF ELECTRIC ARC LIGHTS

Skyscraping by electric light is the latest. At the Roberts-Banner building a string of arc lights has been strung over the plaza site of the new building and last night a crew of concrete men was at work pouring the first floor of the building.

The reason for the night shift is that the architects and contractors wish to have the first floor poured as nearly at the same time as possible in order that it will set uniformly.

The first floor reinforcing is now in position and the first section of it is being poured today.

by Rev. S. C. Allison, of Alpine, Texas, to make the plans for the Allison building to be built in Roswell, N. M., four stories instead of three. This building will be a reinforced concrete one and will be occupied as a store and office building.

It was the original intention to make it but two but a third story was added. When this was done the demand for offices in it was so strong that Rev. Mr. Allison decided to increase it to four stories and ordered the El Paso architects to increase the size of the Roswell building.
